About Owner/Executive Chef C.K.

C.K.Sau grew up in Hong Kong where he started his apprenticeship with an acclaimed master chef at age 13. As a young man, C.K. traveled extensively to further develop and demonstrate his Chinese culinary skills in Beijing, Shanghai, Milan, Paris, and New York. In 1985, C.K. settled to Boston where he was the executive chef of Sally Ling's restaurant on the North End waterfront.

In 1986, C.K.'s culinary expertise was recognized when he was invited inside the Forbidden City in Beijing and awarded the "Super-Grade Chef" by Grand Master Chef Association of Beijing, China.

In 1989, the National Registry of Chefs enrolled C.K. as one of America's Outstanding Chefs. In 1993, C.K. opened New Shanghai restaurant in Boston's Chinatown, which received numerous awards and praises from food critics. After his 11 year run with New Shanghai, C.K. headed West to open CK' Shanghai in the town of Wellesley, continuing his passion for cooking Chinese cuisine.

According to Boston Magazine, "One visit and you won't mistake this place for another Chinese restaurant". Boston Globe review states "Sau is a master chef and his finest dishes should be treasured." CK' Shanghai was selected as one of 29 best ethnic restaurants.

Our commitment for traditional and creative Chinese cuisine, using the freshest and finest ingredients is what truly sets CK' Shanghai apart.
